

Patricia

The following is a step-by-step photographic sequence of the tying of the Patricia

Materials for Original Pattern

- Hook: Steelhead/Salmon Size 2-8
- Thread: Claret
- Tail: Claret Hackle Fibers
- Body: Claret Dubbing
- Rib: Silver Tinsel
- Collar: Claret
- Cheek: Jungle Cock (Optional)

Step #1
The Hook securely in vise

Step #2

Wrap hook with a thread base and tie in Tag material.

Step #3

Tie in Tail material.

Step #4

Dub thread, wrap forward to just behind the hook eye, lay down rib and tie off.

Step #5

Wrap collar and tie in Wing material.

Step #6

Attach Cheeks and whip finish.

Other Hairwing Patterns

Top: Improved Governor. Floss rear body and herl front.

Left: Peacock Skunk. This is a merger of patterns - The Skunk and the Spade. I used the Alec Jackson method of making a "rope" of tinsel and peacock herls spun together to build the body.

Right: Brad's Brat. Two-Tone Dubbed body.

Final Thoughts: Steelhead Hairwing flies are very simple to tie. If you master this fly, there are 1,000's of similar patterns to build using the same techniques. The differences are color, body materials and tail and wing materials, but the basic design is extremely similar.

The use of Jungle Cock shoulders is optional on most Steelhead Hairwing patterns, but I prefer the looks of the fly with them added.
